

North Fork of the Yampah river, and enters the desert valley of the upper Colorado of the West.

Here the mountain barriers are overcome.—The passes are easy. It will not be necessary to cut a solitary tunnel. Nature has graded the road. St. Joseph and Kansas are about 800 feet above the level of the gulf. The entrance of the pass 600 miles west, is 6,500 feet above that level. The highest point of the pass is about 7,200 feet, and the ascent from the East is gradual for some 40 miles. On the West, it descends to Green river, or the upper Colorado, a distance of 80 miles. From the summit level is an inclined plain, sloping to St. Joseph and Kansas on the East, while on the West the inclination is to the Upper Colorado.

The country from the rolling divide, on the head of the Republican fork, to the head of the Yampah is varied, consisting of wide grassy undulating plains, wooded hills, and swelling mountains, through which wind lovely rich valleys and delicious streams. There are all the inducements to emigration and settlement—wood in abundance—fine water—productive soil and bounding health in the dry, pure atmosphere.

The valley of the Colorado is desolate, except on the immediate margins of the streams, and a group of detached mountains east of Brown's hole; yet it is rich in coal—this mineral being found in many localities and in large bodies.

The route from the pass, proceeds down the Yampah; to a point near the junction of the North and South forks of that stream; thence it pursues a Western course, passing by immense beds of coal, and by the fertile range of the Vermilion mountains, (and which are not indicated on any map) to Green river. Thence there are three routes that can be pursued—one by Fort Bridger—one by the Winta and Utah Lake, and the other or more central, up Henry's fork, and by the head of Webber river to the Great Salt Lake City.

ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTHERN R. R.—A sad accident occurred on the Southern Road on the 4th, caused by the breaking of an axle of a baggage car about four miles from Toledo.

The brakes were instantly applied, and the cars prevented from running off the track, but with sad results to the brakemen.

Mr. John Towns, of Blissfield, was crushed among a pile of rubbish and iron. His bowels were partly torn out, and his body otherwise mangled. No hopes entertained of his recovery.

Mr. Peter Van Camp, of Sylvania, had his right foot crushed. Mr. Charles H. Meade had his right leg badly broken. He was a brakeman, and resides at Adrian.

Mr. J. J. Fox, recently of White Pigeon, now a brakeman, was found wedged under a pile of the ruins, and was taken from a space just large enough to hold his body. He was severely bruised across his thighs and the lower part of his body.

All these individuals were engaged at the brakes to arrest the disaster.—[Journal, of the 5th.

Obituary.

Departed this life in this city, on the 25th day of June, last, after a protracted and painful illness, which she bore with Christian fortitude and submission, Mrs. ANNA F. MILLER, the amiable and devoted consort of Mr. THOMAS MILLER, in the 55th year of her age.

By this inextinguishable dispensation, an affectionate and devoted wife, a tender and watchful mother, a kind and faithful relative, and a truly consistent and useful member of the church, has been removed to the midst of her joys, from the interesting and endeared relations and scenes of life. A fond husband, three interesting daughters, one a smiling infant, aged and dotting parents, and a numerous circle of attached and consulting relatives, all deeply lament the early and unexpected loss by which their cherished hopes and prospects have withered and died. But while they grieve, they mourn their irreparable loss, they enjoy the consoling assurance that death to her has been eternal gain, gain unmeasured, gain entering and indelible. To them, in view of the well remembered incidents of her life, and the recent scenes and triumphs of her transit from the shores of mortality, a supernatural radiance encircles the resting place of her loved remains.

She was enabled, by the grace of the Redeemer, to endure with the most unflinching patience and resignation to the Divine Will, the most protracted and torturing pains.

Having, in early life, and amid the bloom and vigor of health, embraced the Savior, and confided to him her immortal interests, in the trying hours of sickness and dissolution, his grace and presence administered abundant consolation and support.—Not a murmuring word escaped her lips—not a trace of discontent appeared upon her loved brow, or blanched or sunken cheek. Her peace was like a river, constant, and wide and deep and noiseless. Even death was denuded of its terrors, and the grave of all its gloomy horrors. Sweetly reclining her faint and drooping head upon the Savior's heaving breast, she waited in tranquil hope the approach of death, "desiring to depart and be with Christ" then spread her wings and soared away to bright and beautiful scenes and climes in heaven.

"But look! she passes not away in gloom
A light from far illumines her face; a light
That comes beyond the moon, beyond the sun—
The light of truth divine; the glorious hope
Of resurrection at the promised morn;
And amidst there which no'er shall part again."

The Footpath and Highway; or,

WANDERINGS of an American in Great Britain, in 1851 and '52. By Benjamin Morgan. This volume embodies the observations of the author, made during eight months' wanderings, as a correspondent for American Journals; and as he traveled much on foot, differs essentially from those on the same countries, by other writers.

New Themes for the Protestant Clergy;

CREDITS without Charity, Theology without Humanity, and Protestantism without Christianity; with Notes by the Editor on the Literature of Charity, Population, Pauperism, Political Economy, and Protestantism. The great question which the book discusses is, whether the Church of this age is what the primitive Church was, and whether Christians—both pastors and people—are doing their duty. Our author believes not, and, to our mind, he has made out a strong case. He thinks there is abundant room for reform at the present time, and that it is needed almost as much as in the days of Luther.

PETER JOHNSON,

RESPECTFULLY offers his services to the public. He keeps the best quality of razors, and keeps them sharp. He will always pay strict attention to cleanliness and neatness.

He cuts and dresses hair in a style that never fails to please his customers. As a knight of the scissors and razor he yields to none in Hannibal. His charges are reasonably low. As he intends to continue fitting up and improving his establishment, as fast as his means will allow, he hopes to have the patronage of the citizens of Hannibal, whose well known chief characteristic
